- Routing Rules

By implementing print rules, uniFLOW can redirect jobs appropriately so that only small print jobs are routed to laser printers while larger jobs are rerouted to more cost effective and faster multifunctional devices. Very large print tasks can even be rerouted to the central print room.

In addition, users can be forced to print only in black-and-white and duplex. Double-sided printing and deleting print jobs that have not been released helps save paper and money.

uniFLOW can help law firms implement an environmental printing strategy to help save money and improve environmental performance.
